Dear Dr. Lane,

In December 2014, I will be graduating from Shenandoah University with a Master of Science in Physician Assistant Studies. I will be moving back to North Carolina this August to finish my clinical rotations and will seek employment beginning January 2015 upon completion of my PANCE. Upon graduation I look forward to working with a team of medical providers, which will continue to allow me to learn and grow as a Physician Assistant.

Clinical year has taught me a wide array of skills sets, but above all, I believe the most important thing I have learned is to form relationships with my patients. It takes time to really learn how to listen, and this is something I am growing in daily. I think patients respect a provider that takes time to listen to them and discuss their care. When patients have a good understanding of what I am doing and how it will impact their health, I think they are more willing to work with me in order to make them as healthy as possible.

The world of medicine has mesmerized me from a very young age. I have always had the desire to serve others and try to make a difference in not only their health, but also in their day-to-day activities. After meeting a physician assistant while in high school, I immediately knew how I wanted to spend my life and knew I would have a rewarding career by being able to use my talents.

Growing up in a large household really molded me into loving people and guided the daily interactions I have with others. I find that I thrive when I am busy and when I am surrounded by others, which made the PA profession the perfect fit for me. After years of schooling, I realized that I enjoy learning which is especially crucial because the world of medicine changes daily. I truly believe that I would have a fulfilling life working as a Physician Assistant.

Thank you so much for your time and consideration. I can be reached at (222)-222-2222 or emailaddress@su.edu.

Sincerely,

Amanda Brooks
