- If I am providing recommendations involving clinical medicine, they will be based on evidence that is accepted within the profession of medicine as adequate justification for their indications and contraindications in the care of patients. All scientific research I refer to, report, or use in support of justification of a patient care recommendation will conform to the generally accepted standards of experimental design, data, collection and analysis.
- For any drug/product discussed, the data must be objectively selected and presented, both favorable and unfavorable information about the drug must be fairly presented, and I will include information about reasonable alternative treatment options. Where there is a suggestion of superiority of one drug/product over another, this suggestion needs to be supported by evidence-based data.
- If I am discussing specific healthcare products or services, I will use generic names to the extent possible. If I need to use trade names, I will use trade names from several companies when available, and not just the trade name from a single company.
- If I am discussing any drug/product that is off-label, I will disclose the use or indication in question that is not currently approved by the FDA.
- If I am presenting research funded by a commercial company, the information presented will be based on generally accepted scientific principles and methods, and will not promote the commercial interest of the funding company.
